Moderator: Welcome, everyone, to our discussion about healthy cities. With us today are Mr. Amani Ojo, an architect, Ms. Maya Patel, an engineer, and Mr. Jason Mui, a resident who cares about public health. So let's get started. What does a healthy city look like? Mr. Ojo, what do you think?

Mr. Ojo: Well, I see it in the building design. Good architecture encourages people to move their bodies and relax their minds. It also helps them meet and talk to other people. This happens in public areas, such as green spaces and walking paths. When I design a building, I want everyone to feel welcome, safe, and comfortable.

Moderator: That's so important. Ms. Patel, what are your thoughts?

Ms. Patel: I agree 100 percent with Mr. Ojo about building design. A healthy city also has efficient public transportation and makes good use of water and clean energy. In short, a healthy city is sustainable.

Moderator: And how about you, Mr. Mui? What are some qualities of a healthy city?

Mr. Mui: There are public spaces and services available to everyone. My neighborhood has paths for biking and walking. The local farmer's market has inexpensive fruits and vegetables. There's also a public garden that anyone can use. When we need something, we get together and ask the local government to do something. That's how we got more bike lanes and a modern hospital.

Moderator: That's amazing. And it shows us how we are all responsible for building healthier cities. My next question is . . .

Listen. Choose the correct answer to complete each sentence.

17. Mr. Ojo thinks that good architecture helps people exercise, relax, and ...
a. talk to other people.
b. stay away from crowds.
c. be separate from other people.
18. Ms. Patel talks about public transportation and good use of water and ...
a. food.
b. energy.
c. green spaces.

21. A circadian rhythm is probably ...
- a. the way humans respond to light and dark.
  - b. a special type of window that lets us see better.
  - c. natural light from the sun.
22. Ventilation is probably ...
- a. a way to change the temperature.
  - b. a system that lets fresh air enter and move through a space.
  - c. something that can make us sick.

ANSWERS: 21. a, 22. b

POINTS: 2

Audio 2

Moderator: Mr. Ojo, as an architect, tell us about living spaces. How can they keep us healthy?

Mr. Ojo: One way is with windows. Natural light makes us feel happier. It's also important for our circadian rhythms. Seeing the sun helps us get up in the morning.

Moderator: Yes, and then when it's dark, it's easier to get to sleep at night. That's so important for our bodies.

Mr. Ojo: Absolutely! Good ventilation is also important. We need fresh, clean air. When the air moves in and out, it takes away viruses and other things we don't want to breathe. Air from outside also makes the inside temperature change. Surprisingly, that is really good for our bodies.

Moderator: Oh, yes, of course! Good ventilation has big effects on our health.
