Ana: Welcome! Today we're talking about the National Geographic Adventurer of the Year. I'm Ana Perez, and my cohost is Sunil Shah. Sunil, who won the award in 2022?

Sunil: Hi, Ana. Lisa Blair from Australia won in 2022. She sailed around Antarctica by herself, and she did it faster than anyone else...in 92 days.

Ana: That sounds dangerous! Was she afraid?

Sunil: Not really. Lisa enjoys taking risks.

Ana: Was the Antarctica trip the first big risk she took?

Sunil: No. For example, in 2008, she sailed from Australia to Hawaii.

Ana: That's a long way.

Sunil: Yes, it is! Then, in 2011, she sailed around the world in a race. There were other people on the boat. For Lisa, that made the race too easy. She wanted to try something more difficult. So she decided to sail around Antarctica, alone.

Ana: Wow!

Sunil: Lisa started her first Antarctica trip in 2017. But she wasn't able to finish it.

Ana: Why not?

Sunil: There was a big storm. Parts of her boat broke. She had to change her plans.

Ana: What did she do next?

Sunil: She sailed around Australia, in 2018. For Lisa, that was more difficult than sailing around Antarctica. Near Antarctica, there are few boats. But near Australia, there are lots of boats. Lisa didn't want to hit them, so she stayed awake most of the time.

Ana: What?! Your body needs sleep!

Sunil: I know, but Lisa is very strong! She was tired, but she finished the trip in 58 days. Then, in 2022, she tried to sail around Antarctica again . . .

Ana: And she did it this time! Amazing!
