Read the passage.Reducing Plastic Pollution

In 2007, English surfer Martin Dorey went to a local beach in Cornwall, South West England, and found it covered in plastic bottles. Dorey decided he wanted to make a difference. He organized a beach cleanup. A lot of the items collected during the cleanup were the same: bottles, bottle tops, plastic knives and forks, plastic bags, and wet wipes—everyday items that people use all the time. He continued to organize clean-ups. After a big storm in 2013, he found the beaches again covered with plastic pollution. Dorey decided to use social media to get people who lived near the ocean to spend just two minutes picking up plastic from the beach. He called this “the 2 minute beach clean.” The campaign was successful, and thousands of people took part in different cleanups. They began to put cleaning stations on beaches, so people could throw away the plastic. By 2023, there were more than 1,000 cleaning stations on beaches all around the U.K. and Ireland.

In 2019, Dorey created a charity called “The 2 Minute Foundation” to encourage people to spend a couple of minutes cleaning their local area—beaches, parks, local streets, and so on. He believes that we all have the power to change the world, and that many small actions together can make a big difference. More and more people are beginning to realize how important it is to protect the environment. The Blue Planet, a series of BBC documentaries by the famous presenter and nature expert, David Attenborough, showed that the problem of plastic pollution was very serious. It was watched by millions of people, and many of these people began to take their own small actions to help.

Dorey points out that every time we don’t buy a plastic bottle, a plastic bag, or a plastic straw, it stops those items from ending up in the ocean and harming the wildlife. To encourage more people to get involved, Dorey provides lots of simple ways we can all reduce our waste and help the environment in two books he has written about plastic pollution: No. More. Plastic. and No. More. Rubbish. Excuses. For example, he suggests that we all think about the things we buy at the supermarket. We can use our own bags, we can buy loose vegetables, not ones in plastic, and we can avoid buying items that can’t be recycled. And when we buy a take-out coffee, we can use our own cups. These are all small actions that are quick and easy to do—and they help.

Model:

I went with some friends to the shopping mall last weekend. The mall is a short bus ride from my home. We looked around a few big stores, and I bought some makeup. I bought the makeup because I saw it on social media. It looked great and I really wanted to try it. We had lunch at the mall and later we went to a few small clothing stores. I bought a T-shirt at one. It was a good day. We didn't spend much, and we all had fun.
